Jean Kilbourne

How Women are Protrayed in Advertising

Jean Kilbourne has a doctorate in education from Boston University. The Boston Globe describes her as a “superstar lecturer”. She is known for her wit, warmth and ability to present topics in a way that unites rather than divides. Her focus is on women in advertising, particularly gender stereotypes and the effects on a women’s self-image. In her lecture she will explore the relationship between the images we see in media to actual problems in today’s society.
